

IMMUNE TOLERANCE TO PREDETERMINED ANTIGENS

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

[0086] The present invention provides compositions and methods for inducing immune tolerance to one or more specific antigens in a host mammal. Generally, the methods involves engineering white blood cells, in vitro, to express an antigen which is not native to the host mammal. Cells engineered ex vivo are then introduced into the host mammal to induce immune tolerance to the expressed antigen.